* * * * * *

Have you ever wondered what we really all look like at the User Club? Have you tried to picture the face behind the voice? Well, here's a piccy of some of the sales team at the club just waiting to take your call in our Great Sellathon '89. Our rogues gallery from left to right are:

CLUB HITS THE HALF CENTURY

Many members who drop in to see us at the club here in Sunderland are astounded when they see the scale of our operation! We think they must half imagine us as being two or three people operating the club from a front living room, when in actual fact, our staff now exceeds 50 in number! Our expansion and continued recruitment program will ensure that our personnel will reach the 60 mark by June. The huge success of the Amstrad computer range together with the need for a comprehensive support club has meant rapid growth of the Official Amstrad User Club and Amsoft Mail Order. This expansion means that we are able to offer the best service possible to all our thousands of members, with our on-line technical support team, 24-hour ordering service, discounted software, and extensive product range with the Amsoft Mail Order operation. Why not drop in if you're passing and see us for yourselves!

ALL IN THE BEST POSSIBLE TASTE

WH Smiths, Boots and John Menzies have all withdrawn stocks of "Rock Star Ate My Hamster" from their shelves in a mass protest against the distasteful game. The outrageous title is a new release from Codemasters, and is based on a theme of pop star management. The multiples insist that the packages will not be restocked until the instruction booklet — in the form of a mock newspaper called "The Stun" — is removed. The game is apparently aimed at the younger player, but the booklet includes lewd references to sex, violence, pages of toilet humour and gross personal habits! Codemasters in defence of the slating their products received said "We feel it's a little unfair because humour is a matter of personal taste. This is the first truly humorous computer game and so we're breaking new ground."

* DON'T MOVE SOUTH! *

The National Economic Development Council has set up a scheme "to bridge the skills gap" between computer professionals in the North and career opportunities in the South. Separate groups of computer specialists and trainees will be located in Leeds, Birmingham and Doncaster all linked by computer to a central office in London. Data will then be sent on to contracting companies around the country. The scheme will be mutually beneficial: training and jobs will be brought to unemployment blackspots, whilst companies finding difficulty recruiting skilled computer operators will be given a helping hand. The NECD hopes to raise £500,000 for the Frontline scheme.

F.T. I.N.D.E.X. P.L.U.M.M.E.T.S.! Watch Out! There's a

Some people awaited the Budget eagerly, others barely noticed Nigel Lawson's big day, but for journalists working at the Financial Times, the recent Budget was a day most would rather forget! Just as news came streaming in for the most important issue in the FT's year, their magnificent computer system decided to blackout, with the appalled journalists having to merely stare at blank screens for almost two hours. The solution? To draft in a team of specialists from Sacramento, California, a mere 6,000 miles away. The troubleshooters tapped into the FT network and were horrified to find 300 articles jamming up the Tandem system (need we say more?!) — all of which should have been saved onto discs (but of course, we hear you scream!). The end of it was that the team leader, one Eric Gottfredson, saved the day and managed to restore all the data within minutes — "like carrying out radical brain surgery" said the man himself! The worrying part is that the cause of the FT crash has still not been discovered.

Watch Out! There's a Pirate About!

The largest campaign yet to quell the tide of software piracy which threatens to submerge the industry has been launched by software houses, the Federation Against Software Theft (FAST), and a number of leading computer magazines. The objective of the campaign is to increase awareness, especially amongst youngsters, that copying software is illegal and that culprits can be prosecuted. Ocean has already pledged to feature warning flashes on its games stating that copying is illegal, and other publishers are expected to do likewise. Magazines from publishers such as Future, EMAP, Newsfield, Gollner and Database will be offering colour advertising promoting the message. For all the cynics out there who believe that piracy will never be stamped out, Mr. Bob Hay who is the co-ordinator of FAST stated, regarding the campaign that "We wouldn't do it if we thought it wouldn't work". The campaign may well increase awareness, but whether it will actually contribute to people ending the practice of copying software remains to be seen.

In this light-hearted but immensely challenging look at The Bard's world through the keyboard of modern man, you find yourself, after watching too many Shakespeare plays (or perhaps reading them) wandering around a strange land. Here they use a richer language than usual, and some of the scenes remind you of certain Shakespeare plays. How you are going to return successfully to the present day is something that you will have to work out for yourself.

- Why does the adventure take place on three different dates?
 What is the significance of the lady Portia's caskets?
 Why does Yorick sometimes say "Golesida" and sometimes something else?
 Why do you suddenly find yourself wearing an ass's head?

These are just some of the tantalizing puzzles that you'll meet when you welcome AVON... An exhaustive knowledge of Shakespearean Canon is not necessary as, in most cases, just the problems rather than the solutions are taken from Shakespeare. If you get stuck, on-line help is there to stop the sighing .

If you've been having problems with your disc drives lately, by getting Read Fail Errors with discs that have been working okay before, then you could rectify this by making sure that the drive is clean. Most problems occur because the drive has dust trapped inside and this dust will collect onto your discs and eventually damage them by scratching the surface. The cleaning kits are available from the User Club at £7.99 retail and £6.75 to members. Dust covers could also help by stopping the dust before it collects in the drive.

Some CPC users have still been experiencing difficulties loading and running programs whilst having a Multiface two rom utilities box. The reason for this is that the Multiface two must be switched off before loading any program. The procedure is as follows; RESET the computer, using the Multiface two Reset button, press the stop button to get the menu bar at the bottom of the screen, and then press S to save, then X to return to the cursor prompt.

We get a lot of members who have bought an Amstrad DMP2160 printer, writing in, telling us that they have typed one of the programs from the back of the DMP2160 manual and that they are getting error messages when trying to run them. Well, all three programs have been typed and tested by the technical department and all three of them work with no problems.

So, please, before you send us your printouts, check through the listings very carefully and correct any errors present no matter how small, even the slightest mistake of adding a comma or missing a comma can cause an error to occur.

Prices are correct at the time of going to press. All prices include V.A.T. The Official Amstrad User Club and Amsoft Mail Order, Enterprise House PO Box 10, Roper Stret, Pallion Industrial Estate, Sunderland SR4 6SN. Tel: (091) 510 8787.

VIRUSES -THE TRUTH

There has been a blaze of publicity recently about the spread of malicious computer viruses. If you believe everything you hear, there appears to be a plague of viruses sweeping the country even as we speak! Remember the last Friday 13th, way back in January? We were all warned to sign on to our systems with Saturday 14th's date to prevent a virus eroding our programs. And what happened when we forgot? Absolutely nothing to most of us! However, large corporates such as British telecom and British Rail who rely heavily on computer systems to form the main core of their and british half who rely heavily on computer systems to form the main core of their business structures, cannot ignore any impending epidemic. Together with other companies, they have formed the non-profit making group called the Computer Threat Research Association (COTRA) to investigate the virus problem and to try and protect British users. Anyone can join COTRA — from large multinationals to individual users. Mark Gibbs, chairman of COTRA said about the virus problem "There is a degree of scare mungering and misconceptions about it and a definite lack of information. We want to look closely at the issues." COTRA can be contacted on of information. We want to look closely at the issues". COTRA can be contacted on 0836 865944.

Price Waterhouse has itself published a handbook illustrating 20 of the major viruses presently at large throughout the UK. Worst estimates are that the number of viruses may infact run into the hundreds.

The picture at the User Club is that we have thousands of members including the corporates, but to date we have heard very little about contaminated systems.

CALLING ALL MEMBERS!

Some of our members are using the form printed in the Official Amstrad CPC magazine to renew their membership subscription. Unfortunately, the form relates to an annual subscription for the magazine, and is in fact nothing to do with membership of the User Club! We send out a renewal brochure to the members we haven't contacted personally by telephone first, to give details of subscription to the club for the next 12 months. You can also renew your membership over the telephone and choose your free gift!

have just received my CPC Bundle pack but there is one thing that puzzles me, how do I connect my MP-2 and MP-3 to the monitor, there seems to be an awful lot of wires but nowhere to put them?

You will be pleased to know that you are not the only person having this problem. The connectors are as follows.

The 5 pin din plug goes from the monitor into RGB out socket on the MP-3. The Jack plug coming out of the MP-3 goes into the back of the MP-2.

The jack coming out of the monitor remains in the keyboard. Disregard the jack plug and the 5 pin DIN on the MP-2. The only thing left to do is to connect the aerial to the MP-3 and away you go.

Mr. Wood from Essex writes:

I own a CPC6128 with a colour monitor, and would like to know if it is possible to connect a 5.25" disc drive to my computer without harming it in any way and be able to access it without too much trouble. Also if a drive is available would it be possible to run PC programs on my machine?

You'll be glad to know that there is a 5.25" drive available for the CPC computer and retails from the User Club at £190.90 and £176.50 for members. This is a PACE 5.25" drive and is supplied with all the necessary leads for connection.

The CPC machines have a totally different processor to the PC's and so you won't be able to use PC software.

I have been using my CPC464 for a few years now, mostly for graphics and gaming, with this in mind I recently purchased an LP-1 light pen. Unfortunately when I tried it I found that it would only work very intermittently (i.e. about I selection in 10). Is this a hardware problem, software problem or something

Editor replies:
The problem that you have described above is something that does occasionally occur with the LP-1. What is happening is that the optical sensor inside the pen is not receiving enough light to activate it because the 'nib' of the pen is slightly too narrow. The solution is to carefully unscrew the pen's barrel parties a keife or blade of a pair of scissors carefully widen and using a knife, or blade of a pair of scissors, carefully widen the opening in the pen very slightly. Be sure not to break the plastic. This should allow enough light into the pen, and, after reassembling the barrel, the pen will work.
